OUR PROFILE

The Town of Edinburgh is a vibrant community situated along the Interstate 65 Corridor between Indianapolis, IN and Louisville, KY. The community provides a diverse and expanding set of opportunities and is currently experiencing industrial growth. Strategically located with easy access to major metropolitan populations and amenities, Edinburgh maintains the feel of the traditional small Midwest Town. Excellent parks and natural resources provide opportunities for entertainment and recreation.

Uniquely located in three counties, Edinburgh is adjacent to Camp Atterbury. This military institution is comprised of thirty-six thousand acres utilized for individual, collective and joint operation training and maneuvering. Camp Atterbury is also the home of Muscatatuck Training Center, an urban training center utilized by the Department of Defense, along with nationwide police, fire and EMT departments. In 2021 Camp Atterbury became one of eight national sites that housed Afghanistan Refugees providing a safe-haven and preparing them for resettlement across the United States.

Edinburgh has an estimated population of 4,443 and the corporate boundaries consist of 3.1 square miles. In addition, the town provides utilities and other municipal services to a joint taxing district comprised primarily of industrial parks and the Indiana Premium Outlet Mall on the south side. Recently, a second phase of residential building lots has opened at the Timbergate Golf Course. Town officials are working with developers to identify additional residential development land and opportunities.

TOWN GOVERNMENT

The Town of Edinburgh operates under a Council/Manager structure. The council members are elected at large; two council members are elected in one election cycle and the remaining three in the following year election cycle. The council is responsible for appointing the town manager and town attorney, while the Clerk/Treasurer is elected by residents of the community. Edinburgh is a full-service community providing police, fire/ems/emergency rescue, street, park, and planning along with providing water, sanitary sewer and electric utilities to the community. The town owns, operates and maintains a cemetery and golf course. The town has sixty full time employees and during the summer expands to one hundred fifty employees full and part time. The Town Manager oversees nine department supervisors.

The annual general fund budget for the town is eight million dollars and the utility enterprise funds comprise an additional twelve million dollars.

In addition to management of corporate limits, the town has entered into a joint taxing district with Bartholomew County to manage an industrial park, the Indiana Premium Outlet Mall and interstate interchange service area on the south side of the community. The joint taxing area is currently leading the industrial growth in the area. Edinburgh is part of the Columbus Metropolitan Statistical Area and lies just south of the Indianapolis Metropolitan Statistical Area.

LEADERSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

Residential Housing – Housing and affordable housing have been identified as opportunities for growth in the community. Edinburgh is a net importer of jobs, but residential growth has been stagnated. The current administration is working on expanding the local housing stock, partnerships will need to be created with developers, landowners, and command staff at Camp Atterbury. Annexation of the property will need to occur to make expansion of utilities and public service affordable.

Governmental Partnerships – While being located in three counties is unique it also poses challenges. In addition, Edinburgh is part of the Columbus Metropolitan Statistical Area but sits just south of the Indianapolis MSA. Forming partnerships with appointed and elected officials from adjoining jurisdictions will help create opportunities for growth in Edinburgh and the Region.

Human Capital and Organizational Development - The Town Manager will have the fortune to direct competent, talented, and capable employees who are eager to collaborate and work in an environment with progressive and fair leadership, support, and a cohesive culture. Edinburgh will depend on the town manager to help combat similar problems that all industries are facing; an aging workforce, competition for quality employees and pressure to perform “more with less”. The Town Manager will provide direction, guidance and resources, and allow staff the space to use their talents to perform autonomously in carrying out directives. The Town Manager will also explore staffing and workspace needs to accommodate operational efficiencies.

Infrastructure – Edinburgh prides itself on providing high quality utilities, including electric, to its citizens and businesses. The manager in partnership with the department heads will be responsible for continual upkeep, smart planning for growth, and creating partnerships to continually provide safe, efficient services that are responsive to customer needs.

Quality of Life – The next manager should be prepared to be involved in the community, looking for opportunities to increase quality of life and celebrate the history and wins in the community. The Town manager will make recommendations to council and decisions within authority that will continually improve the community.
